

Four alternatives for Thornhill problem

The Regional District of Kitimat-Stikine is studying the possibility of hiring a bylaws enforcement officer in Thornhill and Lakelse Lake to bring some organization and means of control to the development of those unorganized areas.

Lakelse Lake Director Stan Kerr says people often get most of their construction finished on their buildings before they discover they are breaking regional district bylaws.

Thornhill Director Les Watmough says a committee has been looking into three alternatives for communities like Thornhill. It can amalgamate with Terrace, incorporate as a separate municipality or stay the same. A fourth alternative is to establish a Water Improvement District in Thornhill, which would be a weak form of self-government, but it would be a small step in the right direction, says Watmough.

Elmer Ottenbrett, a Thornhill resident, told the regional district board Saturday that during the construction of a 22 square foot house on his property he was told to stop because, with the existence of another dwelling on another part of his property, he was breaking the bylaw.

Ottenbrett said that he had some undesirable tenants on his property in the existing dwelling and they were evicted. He needed shelter for himself and his wife so he decided to leave the existing dwelling empty and complete his own house.

"How can you justify the fact that you tap me on the shoulder while the rest of Thornhill goes wild breaking the bylaws...I don't mind being forced to stop as long as the rest of the community does the same thing," he says.

Music hall show has star

By BRIAN GREGG
Herald Staff Writer

An associate of Monty Python's Flying Circus was one of the cast members in a music hall presentation by CP Air to travel agents in the area last week.

Terry Bayler is a member of Aba Daba Music Hall from London who has performed in such satirical movies as Monty Python's "Life of Brian" and the NBC spoof on the Beatles with the Rutles' "All You Need Is Cash". Bayler played the Rutles manager, Leggy Moonshatten.

Bayler says he realized the implications of doing a movie like "Life of Brian" because of its irreverence towards Christianity, but his two children, who were raised in a Jesuit school, did not find the script as bad as he thought it was; and they advised him to take his role in the movie.

Canadian humourist Stephen Leacock is popular with Bayler. "I want to thank Canada for him...he's great," says Bayler.

The English Music Hall finds its roots with the working class; but instead of trying to put it in its historical perspective the Aba Daba Music Hall simply uses that format as a vehicle for today's brand of humor. Aba Daba employs a total of 300 people who are also active in other areas of entertainment. "We use six people at one time and each show changes every two weeks," says

Aline Waites, a member. Other members are Maggie Beckit, Helen Watson, John Gould, and Jim McManus.

Aba Daba gives professional actors the opportunity to work in a pub atmosphere. It involves old music hall songs, a bit of food and a bit of drink. "We like to keep it loose...the show brought tears to the eyes of British people in the audience," says Waites.

The show at the Lakelse Hotel was designed as a promotion for CP Air and the British Tourist Authority to persuade travel agents to send people to London.

Terrace was the last stop before the group returned to London.

EX-HOSTAGES

Homecoming remains quiet

WEST POINT, N.Y. (Reuter) — The freed hostages relaxed with their families today after returning to the United States from Iran where they were captives of Islamic militants for about 15 months.

Ernest Cooke, father of former hostage Donald Cooke, told reporters late Sunday the atmosphere inside the Thayer Hotel on the grounds of the U.S. Military Academy was subdued.

"It's quiet in there," he said. "No one is having a wild party. No one is getting looped (drunk)."

The 52 hostages were released last Tuesday shortly after Ronald Reagan was sworn in as the new U.S. president. They set foot on American soil Sunday after four days of psychological and physical exams at a U.S. Air Force near Wiesbaden, West Germany.

Their 27-kilometre route from Stewart International Airport in Newburgh to the brick and stone hotel was lined by an estimated 200,000 people — many waving American flags and sporting yellow ribbons, a symbol of the captives' return.

Cooke, whose 25-year-old son was on his first tour of duty as a vice-consul when the U.S. Embassy in Tehran was seized, said the size of the welcoming crowds made his son nervous.

"He was not frightened, just upset," the elder Cooke said. "You have to remember, he has been isolated for many months."

The former hostages walked off their air force jetplane — dubbed Freedom One — shouting "God bless America!" and "Thank God, we're home!"

U.S. Marine guards captured at the embassy Nov. 4, 1979, were the first to leave the plane. Wearing fresh uniforms, they paused briefly on the airplane's stairway, then snapped brisk salutes.

Minutes later, all of the former hostages were off the plane and in the arms of their loved ones.

Stewart airport manager Frank Tarbell described the joyous scenes of welcome this way: "I had to turn my head away. It became too much to watch. I felt I was crying."

Security was tight. Reporters and spectators were kept away from the returnees and their families because the freed captives wanted the family reunions to be as private as possible.

The request for privacy did not stop thousands of people who wanted to witness the historic event. The crush on the two-lane road to West Point was so thick that the ex-hostages were caught in the middle of a traffic jam.

Among the well-wishers was Margaret Evans of Port Jervis, N.Y., who held a torn and faded American flag.

"I put this flag outside my home the day they were taken," she said.

BOAT MONOPOLY DRAWS COMPLAINTS

Charter boat operators in Kitimat are unhappy with a Regional District of Kitimat-Stikine policy that creates a monopoly for the manager of the MK Bay Marina by giving him exclusive charter rights in return for his management of the regional district facility.

Kitimat Mayor George Thom says that if marina operator Don Pierson's charter business rights are taken away from him it will cost the regional district $100,000 a year to maintain the marina.

Joe Leduc, a charter boat operator, protested the board's policy at its meeting in Terrace on Saturday. He also asked why the board gave the marina's electrical work to a Terrace contractor when a Kitimat contractor offered to do the job for only the cost of materials required. Leduc told the board that moving boats in and out of the marina at night is hazardous because there is no lighting.

Vaughn Hollis, a Terrace resident who also wants to charter out of MK Bay Marina, says the government dock is not an acceptable place to leave one's boat. "The only place I can leave my boat is at MK Bay Marina. I cannot leave my boat there as long as I pick up my customers from there and drop them off there," says Hollis.

Hollis says he wants to buy a $50,000 boat for his charter business but that is impossible under present conditions. The only way Pierson is willing to allow charter boat operators to operate from MK Bay Marina is to give him 25 per cent of their business, says Hollis, who says he found such terms unacceptable.

The regional board have referred the protests to the MK Bay Marina advisory commission. Arnie Kokesch, Bill deJong and Doug DeProy were reappointed to the commission on Saturday. Lakelse Lake Director Stan Kerr and Kitimat Director Lee Ellis are board members on the Commission.

Finally, the wolf secret comes out

After years of protest by the Regional District of Kitimat-Stikine to the provincial government over the problem of wolves in the region the secret is finally out.

Marty Allen, regional district director from Klepox, says the fish and wildlife branch is paying farmers to let the wolves eat their cattle. Last year one farmer was compensated $24,000 for loss in cattle.

"Somebody in fish and wildlife doesn't believe wolves eat cattle and this is all part of the fish and wildlife's study on the wolves eating habits...all fish and wildlife is doing is educating the wolves to eat cattle and if we don't get rid of that bunch of wolves they will infringe on other areas."

Allen's comments drew a howl of disbelief from Kitimat Mayor George Thom, another director on the board. Directors living in remote communities like Klepox and Telegraph Creek have been saying for a long time that wolves have a nasty habit of eating chunks out of cattle on a bite and run basis. Cattle owners find their cattle left bleeding to death with great bites taken from their sides; and because of the provincial government's soft policy regarding wolves, this problem is growing worse every year, say directors like Allen. The wolves are becoming so brave about their eating habits they are now coming up to farmhouses to get dinner.

The board has instructed its administration to write a strong letter of protest to Minister of Environment Stephen Rodgers over the handling of the wolf problem and to demand that poisonous baits be dropped by helicopter in the Skeena watershed where wolves are a problem.

Bungled breakout attempt stymied by grating

...but nobody knows who was leaving

NEW YORK (AP) — Authorities are trying to determine today who was the target for freedom in a daring but bungled attempt by a man and a woman to pluck a prisoner from atop a Manhattan federal prison by using a hijacked helicopter.

The escape attempt fizzled in mid-morning Sunday when the hijackers gave up trying to cut through a grating over a rooftop recreation area at the Metropolitan Correction Centre in downtown Manhattan's Foley Square near City Hall.

But for the next three hours, 20 prisoners held a guard hostage in the recreation area while police trained rifles on them from rooftops and hundreds of people watched from nearby apartment towers. Warden Dale Thomas said a recently convicted narcotics dealer, Robert Wyler, is one of the prisoners under investigation as a possible target of the incident. The FBI declined comment.

Wyler was accused of heading a three-state cocaine ring and was alleged by prosecutors to be a member of the Mafia.

The escape attempt ended without injury, and no shots were fired. After lounging in the sun and playing basketball in the shadows of whirling police helicopters, the prisoners on the roof, including Wyler, negotiated a surrender at about 1 p.m. EST, officials said.

The incident began at 7 a.m. when a dark-haired woman who said her last name was Sanchez rented a helicopter from Island Helicopters Corp. at New Jersey's Teterboro Airport, about 11 kilometres from Manhattan.

The pilot, identified by police as Thomas Niet-sche, took the woman over the Hudson River and the island of Manhattan to a heliport on Manhattan's East Side, where they were met by another woman.

The second woman gave the first woman two bags, the women and the pilot had breakfast at a nearby restaurant, and Sanchez and the pilot returned in the helicopter to Teterboro, where they picked up a man who appeared to be in his 40s, authorities said.

Anthony Amancio, general manager of Island Helicopters, said the man and woman asked the pilot to return to Manhattan.

In the air, the two passengers offered the pilot money to land on the roof of the federal detention centre, Amancio said. When he refused, "they placed a sawed-off shotgun to his head and told him it no longer was a request."

Nietzsche landed the helicopter on the cage over the 12-storey jail shortly after 10 a.m. and the prisoners there overpowered their unarmed guard and locked him in a washroom.

The woman in the helicopter let down a chain-link ladder, lowered herself to the wire mesh and tried to sever the wire, authorities said.

Her companion also tried to cut the wire, without success.

In a final effort to puncture the cage, the hijackers ordered the pilot to bounce the helicopter on it. But that also failed.

One of the hijackers tossed a pistol to the prisoners through the cage and the pilot was ordered to fly to another heliport beside the Hudson River on Manhattan's West Side.

There a woman was waiting in a Cadillac, and the three drove away, authorities said.

The carefully timed attempt recalled successful escapes that employed helicopters in Michigan and Mexico City in 1971 and in Dublin, Ireland, in 1973. A 1978 attempt in Marion, Ill., outside Chicago, failed.

SURREY, B.C. (CP) — Racism is a crime, not an attitude, and its victims should have recourse through the legal system, MLA Emory Barnes (NDP — Vancouver Centre) said Sunday.

"There is no legal means whereby one can determine whether their rights have been offended or their dignity has been affected," Barnes told a rally sponsored by the B.C. Organization to Fight Racism.

"When their rights have been violated, there is not an immediate access to challenge that source of offence. I want my day in court!"

Under present legislation, the attorney-general's office determines whether an act of discrimination is serious enough to warrant prosecution, not the individual involved, he told about 400 people.

"If there is no legal process, you'll have hoodlums doing what they did to that young man, or people taking the law into their own hands," said Barnes. He was referring to Avtar (Terry) Dhami, an East Indian college student who told the rally about 20 youths, some carrying baseball bats and iron bars, roughed up him and his girlfriend and smashed the car they were sitting in last Thursday in Vancouver.

"The police didn't do anything about it," said Dhami. "There has to be a stop to this racial violence. There was a lot of white people on the street they could have attacked. Why did they pick on me? Because of my color."

But Vancouver Ald. Harry Rankin said new legal remedies are not the answer.

Rankin called on the anti-racism organization to pressure police and local governments to investigate such incidents and get charges laid.

He said the group should also pressure communities not to grant business licences to the Ku Klux Klan or similar organizations which wish to establish offices in the Vancouver area.

"We think that the most important way to fight racism is by agitation," said BCOFR president Charan Gill. "If we mobilize people we will build a strong force not only against the Klan but against all forms of racism."

$18 million sought for salmon

VANCOUVER (CP) — Federal Fisheries Minister Romeo LeBlanc will be asked for $18 million in additional funding for the salmonid enhancement program, the program's board of directors said Sunday.

The decision to ask for more money was made following joint weekend meetings between an advisory group and the program's board.

The advisory group had alleged the program was in danger of total failure because of a shortage of funds. The program is designed to double annual catches of salmon, steelhead and trout by 1990.

The advisory body, the salmonid enhancement study group, is made of members of the public and industries affecting the salmon resource. The group said inflation and a two-year extension of the program had made original funding of $150 million inadequate.

The board had maintained that the program was already ahead of objectives but has agreed to request additional funds.

The program now is in the fourth year of the seven-year first phase. In the first phase the federal government was to invest $150 million in hatcheries, fishways and artificial spawning beds with the province providing another $7.5 million.

POLAND FEELS EFFECTS OF UNREST

WARSAW (Reuters) — Poles have been warned of the dangers of continuing labor unrest and told that an unending cycle of strikes is damaging the country's image abroad.

The warning followed a three-day wave of strikes by millions of Polish workers demanding a five-day workweek.

Deputy Foreign Minister Marian Dobrosielski said on national television Sunday night that international confidence in Poland is beginning to wane.

"I have to admit bluntly that the development of our internal situation does not strengthen the international authority and the position of Poland," he said.

Both the independent trade union federation Solidarity, which called the strikes, and the government have said they are prepared to resume talks on work-free Saturdays and other issues, but no date has been set.

Poland has been hit by unremitting industrial unrest for the last seven months. Official estimates show that more than five million Poles stayed away from work Saturday.

The countrywide boycott paralysed industry and caused a loss in production officially estimated at $66 million

U.S. Solidarity maintains that the government undertook to introduce a 40-hour workweek in agreements with strikers last summer. The government concedes the point but says that no timetable has been set.

The government has reduced the work week by one day every two weeks, telling Poles to work alternate Saturdays. Solidarity has suggested one working Saturday a month as a possible compromise.

Negotiations are bound to go far beyond the number of hours which Poles work each week.

Federal NDP threatens to withdraw backing

OTTAWA (CP) — The New Democratic Party has threatened to withdraw its support of the federal constitutional package if the government keeps its promise to accept a Progressive Conservative amendment on the rights of property owners.

"There's no way we can accept the (constitutional) resolution with that amendment in it," NDP Leader Ed Broadbent said in an interview Sunday.

Solicitor-General Robert Kaplan announced last week that the government will accept the Conservative amendment even though many provinces objected to a similar proposal last summer during negotiations with Ottawa.

Parliament's constitution committee, which contains 15 Liberals, eight Conservatives and two New Democrats, was expected to vote on the issue today.

The proposed amendment reads: "Everyone has the right to life, liberty and security of the person and enjoyment of property and the right not to be deprived thereof except in accordance with the principles of natural justice."

Several provinces, especially Saskatchewan and Prince Edward Island, are afraid such an amendment could interfere with existing laws restricting foreigners or non-residents to purchase land.

Kaplan has said the proposed amendment would merely ensure that property cannot be confiscated unless in the public interest and only after a fair hearing. These guarantees would apply to both individuals and corporations.

Loss of NDP support for the entire constitutional package would be a hard blow for the government.

Prime Minister Trudeau has been courting the NDP so that he can claim to have support from the West. Twenty-six of the NDP's 32 MPs are from the West. The Liberals have only two Western MPs in Winnipeg.

The governments of British Columbia, Alberta and Manitoba are vigorously opposing the federal constitutional package. The NDP government of Saskatchewan has given conditional support but is not expected to win the concessions it has been seeking.

Broadbent said he must consult his caucus before saying he will definitely vote against the constitutional proposals when Parliament is asked to send the patriation package to Westminster for final passage. However, consulting his MPs seemed a mere formality.

"I haven't the slightest doubt what their reaction would be," he said. "I am so clear that I haven't any doubts."

It has been widely reported that many of Broadbent's western MPs are uncomfortable with the party's public support of the constitutional package and would, therefore, jump at a chance to oppose the proposals.

The entire affair could prove embarrassing for the Conservatives. They have depicted themselves as the defenders of provincial rights, yet introduced an amendment that many provinces, including the Conservative administration in P.E.I., opposes.

The Conservatives defend themselves by saying they want none of the constitutional proposals, except patriation, made law until the provinces agree. However, the Liberal government is determined to change the constitution without any more discussion with the provinces.

K'san House nearly set

K'San House for women in crisis will soon be opening its doors as an emergency shelter for any woman who has been physically abused and emotionally abused.

Judy Vandergucht, chairperson of the K'San House Society, says no one really knows how many women will require assistance from K'San House but estimations are that there are a large number of battered women in Terrace. "Until we actually get going and get our doors open we will not know," she says.

The house is now set up to receive the women it will serve, says Irene Fydyshyn, coordinator of K'San House. "We are in limbo at the moment waiting for the building inspector to make his report. The carpenters have finished their work." The house was flooded in December when the water heating system froze, and a new furnace had to be installed because of damages to the old one.

Women will be allowed to stay at the house for a maximum of five days unless they receive approval from human resources to remain longer. While there the workers will offer them the companionship they need to solve their personal problems. The staff also work with the hospital, human resources, legal aid and other community services.

The house has beds for nine people plus one bed that is reserved for the corrections branch. The Blue Gables Corrections Centre provides a stable environment for men who have been prosecuted for minor offences; and K'San House will provide a similar service for women. It is staffed by Irene Fydyshyn, Sylvia Moogau, an outreach worker and three other full-time support workers. One person is on call as a substitute worker.

The problem of battered women was first realized in 1977 when the Family Rehabilitation and Support Program submitted a brief to human resources. The brief was rejected and the issue died a quiet death until 1978 when a workshop on family violence was held and a committee to deal with the problem was formed. Judy Vandergucht was asked to lead the group toward its goal of becoming a society, which was created in June 1979.

In November 1979 the society worked toward getting a house established but that took four months while the people in charge of the provincial long-term care program in Victoria took its time in realizing that the Terrace group was serious about its demand for a house.

"It sometimes seems like a long haul but it has only taken K'San 1 1/2 years to get going while it has taken other transition houses three years. The greatest difficulty was keeping the committee and the board on a high throughout it all. Although we have free rent for one year there is really not enough money. We are understaffed while the Victoria civil service employs three people to do one job," says Vandergucht.

The house will also give aid to teenage girls and other women who have been thrown out of the house. Some women may not come forward because they are the wives of important people in the community and they prefer to keep their problems in the closet. The house will also provide aid to rape victims.

The K'San House will serve the northwest region including Terrace, Kitimat, Smithers, Hazelton and Hooten. There is a serious problem of battered women in Prince Rupert and a similar house is opening there soon.

Caroline Renwick, of Christchurch New Zealand, arrived in Terrace Sunday to spend one year here while completing her Grade 12 through the Rotary exchange program. Here she is greeted by Gerry Martin. Denise Kenney, of Terrace, left for Chilli in September to spend one year there through the same program. Caroline's biggest surprise about Terrace was not finding any snow or blizzards as she had expected.

A house wife's views on school sex education

Dear Members of the School Board

Thank you for your invitation for "input" on the draft of the proposed sex education program.

Eighteen months ago, Doctor Kobierski became concerned and alarmed about the growing number of teenagers coming to her for abortions. In questioning some of these girls she found that they did not have an adequate knowledge of birth control methods; at least this is what they claimed. Eventually this problem was presented to the school board. After much struggling and lengthy deliberation, the school board has presented for our approval a draft of a sex education program. It is a thorough and comprehensive program, from grade 7 through grade 12, which will include films and text books, as well as many hours of instruction and discussion led by the teacher.

I urge parents to read the draft which is available at the schools, and to carefully consider these issues. Our voices should be heard at this time. It is our children who will be taught. These are our schools, which we unitedly provide with our taxes. We pay the teachers and the school board. This is our decision.

Parents, I want you to know what is being said about us. Doctors, teachers, and school board trustees all agree 100 per cent that sex education is best handled at home. "But," they say "the sad truth is most parents simply aren't doing the job." They don't claim that a few of us aren't; they claim that most of us aren't. Every parent I have talked to agrees, "you and I teach our children, but they (the majority) don't." Is that really true? In all fairness I must confess that I have never met one of those parents who didn't care and didn't try to teach their children. But if it is really true that most parents can't be bothered to teach their children about something as important as sex, if, in fact they don't care enough to find out what the school teaches them - what can we hope for the children? The problems we are experiencing with our teenagers it would seem, is not so much lack of knowledge, as it is lack of parenting.

Here is the crux of the problem. Doctor Kobierski went to the school board out of desperation because parents were falling down on the job. The school board drew up a program which would try to make up for the neglect of parents. Teachers, though they freely admit sex education would be more effective if taught in the home, will try to implement the program because of parental default. Now we can appreciate Doctor Kobierski who cared enough to push for a solution. We can appreciate the school board who conscientiously formulated a program, and we can appreciate the teachers who are willing to do their best with it; but what can we say for the parents who sit back without concern or comment? We must ask ourselves if the proposed solution will do any good. Will all the knowledge in the world help a teenager whose parents do not care? Letting the schools take the blame and accept the responsibility for this problem is a balm for the conscience of parents and at best a "cop out".

The identified problem is that homes are weak and parents apathetic. We have chosen a solution that, through the years will weaken the influence of the home and make parents more apathetic. We must remember that there is absolutely no evidence that a comprehensive sex education program taught through the schools, emphasizing contraception, will effectively reduce the number of teenage pregnancies and abortions.

It would be a nice, easy solution if it would work. Do you really think it will? No matter how conscientiously they try, our educators cannot take the place of good parents. As parents, we are responsible for the problem Doctor Kobierski identified. We are the only ones who can effectively do something about it.

Sex education in the schools is not something new. It has been around for many years. Clarence Michael for example, has been showing sex education films for nine years. Many schools throughout the province have been doing this. If parents were ever asked for their opinion on the matter, other than for their own children, I missed it. So the wedge began many years ago; but it didn't solve any problems. Sexual activity and sexual irresponsibility among teenagers has increased yearly. Now a more comprehensive program with an emphasis on contraception is seen as the answer. Thus continues the gradual shift of responsibility from the home to the school. At first the program was instituted to reach the minority group of children who were being taught nothing at home. Now the majority of parents rely on it. A society that cannot depend on the home, but must institutionalize the raising of its children is in a sad state of affairs. There have been other societies who felt this way - who felt that the institution could do a better job than the home. The Nazis felt that way. So do the communists.

My husband and I have viewed many of the sex education films. We have read the new draft. We find nothing in the content objectionable other than one or two points that we disagree with. However, if the proposed draft is accepted, we will continue to exercise our option in keeping our children out of the program. There is a point here that should be clearly understood. Most parents who object to the school's sex education program do not object to content - they object to the method. We feel that group and institutionalized teaching of sex without moral values is strictly second rate, and a very ineffective way of helping our youth cope. When the film says you are special, who believes it? We want our children to have the knowledge and we provide it for them at home. We believe that by taking this course of action we are saying to our children that sex is something important and special. We believe our actions are also telling our children that they are important and special to us, important enough for us to sit down on a one-to-one basis and share with them our knowledge and feelings about something which will be very important to them. We don't want to leave to others the responsibility that our children will develop wholesome attitudes towards sex. We believe that by keeping our children from participating in the sex education program that we are also saying to the school, "you have no right to teach our children about sex. We are their parents and we accept this responsibility".

Doctors inform us that teenagers are by no means the only ones who come in for abortions. There are also many middle aged women, who are in full possession of the facts who come in for abortions. Knowledge does not prevent them from 'irresponsible sexual behaviour'. Can we really hope to find a method of teaching our teenagers which will keep them from following our bad example? Will the number of teenage abortions decrease while the number of adult abortions increase?

Teaching sex education in schools is not merely transmitting knowledge. It is reducing sex to the same level of importance as dental hygiene. It reflects a lack of awe and reverence for the reproduction of life. The very attempt to teach sex in this way is an emphatic statement from adults to youth that sex is not sacred. I see no logical, intelligent reason for believing that institutionalized group teaching of sex will motivate teenagers to responsible sexual behaviour.

Let us return for a moment to square one. A doctor is concerned about the alarming increase in teenage pregnancies and abortions. She questions them about their knowledge of contraception and the sex education they have received at school. It is because of the nature of her questions that a more comprehensive sex education program in the schools is seen as a logical answer. But let us suppose she asked different questions. Suppose she asked each girl about the example her parents had set for her, or about the relationship she had with her parents, or about whether or not she had ever received any moral guidance? I am suggesting that other factors in those girls' lives could have been identified which played a much greater role in contributing to their unfortunate circumstances than lack of knowledge. We must face the fact that fifty years ago we did not have this problem to such a degree; yet sex education was not taught in the schools. There were just as many, in fact many more 'ignorant' or shall I say 'innocent' teenagers. But most were not 'sexually active' or 'sexually irresponsible'. Therefore lack of knowledge does not cause these things any more than knowledge will prevent them. What our teenagers need is not more knowledge, but more of what those teenagers fifty years ago had - parents who truly believed in and taught old-fashioned morals. Our teenagers cry for bread and we have offered them a stone.

Yes, I am against sex education being taught in the schools. I'm against what they have done in the past. I'm against the new, more comprehensive program. I'm against it not just for my own children; I'm against it for what it will do to our society. These are my reasons:

1. There is no evidence to prove that it will reduce the number of teenage pregnancies and abortions.
2. Even if it did, would the method justify the harm it might do? It may actually increase the number of sexually active teenagers because: a) it emphasizes contraception, b) the whole program is my way of thinking is overdone. I could teach my children all that they need to know in a couple of hours yet this program, to meet the needs of the group, takes years and years to complete. Thus sex is emphasized and re-emphasized at a time when students should already know these things, and when morals, self-control and future goals should be emphasized.
3. It transfers the right and responsibility of parents to the schools.
4. It goes against the traditional role of the school to complement and strengthen the teaching of the home. In order for our democratic society to survive, our homes must be stronger than our institutions. Our present trend, if continued to its logical end will eventually rob us of our individualism and our freedom.

5. It acts as a balm to the conscience of parents and encourages apathy. There are many parents who would teach their children about sex if they did not realize it was being taught at school. Thus when the school tries to take up the slack in order to reach the students whose parents never will bother to teach them, ironically it is causing more and more parents to abdicate this responsibility to the school. It always has been a difficult responsibility and here is a perfect out. By sitting back in silence we are all agreeing that this is the best solution to the problem. By so doing, we are encouraging all parents to 'forget it' and leave it up to the schools, whom we all apparently agree, can do a better job.

6. When it comes to sex, people's morals and values differ greatly. Teachers are human. They have their own views and feelings; however, they are expected to teach this subject impersonally and objectively. I believe it is harmful to teach sex education that way. You can teach dental hygiene in this manner. You can present children with the facts. If they choose not to follow good dental hygiene they may end up with false teeth. But how a student feels about sex and what he chooses to do about it will affect his whole life. To have teachers present these facts in an impersonal and objective way to a large group is an inhumane way of teaching a very human subject. What will be communicated to the student by this unnatural approach? I believe that what will result is such a weak solution of what is needed that it will be like an inoculation against morality. It is not fair to the students. They need someone to tell it to them straight.

7. It is not fair to the teachers. They are given a great responsibility and yet are restricted from doing their best. They have been asked to accept a responsibility they cannot effectively fulfill. The parents need to hear this from the educators.

8. The program as it stands will be hard to control. It says it will be taught by a 'qualified' person. Who will be the judge? When it comes to sections discussing such things as marriage, the pros and cons of premarital sex and other moral issues, no matter how objective the teacher tries to be, will not the outcome of the discussions be affected by that teacher's particular bias? Though the board meant well in its program, who will make sure it is always interpreted and implemented the way it was intended?

There are alternatives. The perfect solution of course, is for loving parents, having first seen good example, to teach their children with great diligence from infancy on, so that they are fortified and prepared before they become teenagers. If more parents would stand on this principle, others would be encouraged to try.

There are other things we can do if we are concerned and want to do something about the sex life and morals of teenagers. We can unite to put pressure on the powers that be to protect our children from immorality in movies, television, songs, and pornographic literature. These mediums have a great influence on the vulnerable minds of our youth. They are doing a more effective teaching job than the parents and schools put together. We can at least shield our children from these things in our homes.

In looking for a healthy solution we must strike at the real root of the problem. If we really want to help teenagers, we need to strengthen homes and encourage parents. Our teenagers need parents who demonstrate love and concern. Even more desperately than they need knowledge. Here is one solution I thought of. May be you can think of a better one.

Before teaching a sex education program to any given grade, a test could be given on the facts which the course plans to cover. Results could be given on the facts which the course plans to cover. Results of this test along with an appropriate answer sheet could be mailed to the parents along with a letter which could read something like this:

Dear Parents, It has been the concern of the public that many young people are not receiving adequate sex education. Increasing pressure has been put on the schools to provide this education. Though schools now teach more sex education than they have ever before the problems which the community hoped to solve through education, i.e. irresponsible sexual behavior, early pregnancies and abortions among teenagers, have increased. In view of these statistics we realize that the school is very limited in its effectiveness in teaching sex education.

Sex is a very personal matter, involving deep human values. Not all people agree on these values. Therefore the teacher must be impersonal and objective. Young people being taught these things need more than facts and information.

Because parents know that sex education takes place at school, many of them who otherwise would take this responsibility upon themselves, leave it up to the schools. This robs their children and themselves of a personal and meaningful experience in which the parent can share not only knowledge but wisdom and experience. When it comes to sex education, we feel there is no substitute for a parent-child heart-to-heart discussion on a one-to-one basis.

In order to facilitate the parents in this responsibility, we have conducted a survey. We are sending your child's results along with an answer sheet and additional information that you may or may not want to use in discussing these things with your child.

If you require additional help or information, the public health unit has a special library from which parents may obtain pamphlets and borrow books and films, which they may take home and discuss with their children. The Public Health will also organize groups of parents who are interested in discussing effective ways of teaching responsible sexuality to their children.

Please find enclosed a card. If you will fill this in and return it to the school we will know that you are taking care of this matter at home. If we do not hear from you we will assume that despite our difficulty in dealing with this subject effectively, you would like us to involve your child in a sex education program as we see fit. Under such a program we cannot guarantee that your child will learn the standards and values that you would wish. By turning this responsibility over to the school, you are giving up the right to determine the attitudes your child will develop. You must understand that in dealing with a large group of students whose parents all have different views, we have no alternative but to teach our own views.

Sincerely,
 Your Principal
 'I believe in what I have tried to say ...'

This solution would at least encourage parents to teach their children themselves. It would also provide for those students whose parents would still neglect to teach them.

I believe in what I have tried to say in this letter. I believe it so deeply that it has been difficult for me to express, and I believe it so strongly that it is hard for me to believe that there are not many more parents who will feel as I do. Now is the time for all parents who feel that the proposed sex education program is not the solution to stand up and let their voices be heard. The school board wants to know how we feel. They are our board and want to represent our wishes. Let's act right now before the draft is approved and the program implemented. Let us show them that the majority of parents do care and will fulfill their parental responsibilities. If you agree with this letter, sign your name to it and send it to the school board in care of Mr. Hamilton.

Sincerely,
 Jean E. Clarke

POST OFFICE FIGHTS BACK

Bruce Lovett

"The message has impact," the message read. Yup. Anything that bounces from the envelope, turns in the air as it forms itself into a missile and does a screaming ricochet off the forehead, can, truthfully, be said to have impact.

"The medium has accuracy," it read. Can't argue with that. Impact and accuracy - a sharp rap on the frontal lobe is absolutely guaranteed to get your undivided attention first thing in the morning.

The subject of the lesson is a gimmick that Canada Post (that's the post office) is mailing to unwary recipients across the country. The object is to extol the virtues of direct-mail advertising.

Canada Post has been the subject of vilification lately and it's fighting back.

This particular ammunition comes in a blue envelope. Tucked inside is a gold-up cardboard contrivance loaded with an elastic band. Release, it springs aloft, forming itself into a 12-sided cube and startling the daylight out of the addressee.

"Now," it bugles in triumph, "will the person who said that nobody ever notices direct mail advertising please leave the room?"

Many do. Swiftly. Down to the Duchman's for a generous infusion of soothing syrup while the pulse returns to normal. This cunning little device comes with holes that make it useful as a pencil-holder. It is also a calendar which informs you that when it's Saturday where you are, it's Samedi in Quebec (or vice-versa.)

It arrived in this office on a day when the local paper was filled with letters to the editor on the efficiency - or lack thereof - of Canada Post.

The heads read: "Postal service downgraded; 12 miles in 20 days; Cheques were lost, delayed. ..."

They posed such questions as: "What's wrong with postal delivery? Register all mail? Carrier pigeons?"

Well, you have to admit, there are six letters at least which reached the destination.

The longest diatribe of the lot is one from a citizen complaining that it took from Dec. 4 to Jan. 4 for a letter to get to him over a distance of 12 miles.

Theirate one contrasts this with a missive he received from Koberski, Zambia, in only 15 days.

Unless he got personal delivery via cliff attack, who does he think delivered the letter to his front door? Canada Post, that's who. And, in this case, right smartly, too.

There are a lot of our fellow citizens out there with Canada Post doing their best. If it doesn't come up to our expectations, then maybe our sights are set too high.

Besides, if we were getting instant delivery how would we be able to plead "the cheque is in the mail?"

Nuclear energy inquiry 'buried'

OTTAWA (CP) — Opposition spokesmen say the Liberals are trying to bury the federal inquiry into nuclear energy, denying public comment on the subject.

The Progressive Conservatives had planned a full public review during their brief term in office, but the Liberals settled for an internal study with limited public involvement.

"I clearly don't think that's a satisfactory way of doing it," said Michael Wilson, the former Progressive Conservative trade minister and his party's energy critic.

"I think the strength of feeling, both pro and anti nuclear, makes it important for the federal government to take a very clear reading of those different views as they affect national policy."

Mark Rose of the New Democratic Party is more blunt.

"It's what they do all the time. They bury it within government."

A 1979 resolution by the NDP urged a moratorium on new nuclear facilities until an inquiry into whether Canada should continue pushing international nuclear sales is completed.

The Liberal review of the nuclear industry was launched last spring and a draft report is expected within weeks.

It takes for granted that nuclear sales abroad and the use of nuclear energy at home should continue — a policy which the NDP has vowed to reverse.

Energy Minister Marc Lalonde had promised "well-organized exchanges" involving the public once the review was finished. And the most recent indication is that the government plans to solicit public comments.

But in releasing the review Ottawa will have to guard confidential information supplied by private firms.

"It is the government's intention to retain the nuclear option for generation of electricity in Canada, as required by demand, and to seek markets abroad," said Roy MacLaren, Lalonde's parliamentary secretary.

The industry faces a grim future, he said, with no new reactor orders for more than a year and Ontario's electrical demand expected to fall off.

The review must be done quickly, and avoid duplicating studies already done by some provinces, MacLaren said. Still to be decided is how much should be made public.

Wilson, a Toronto MP, agrees with the need for speed, and says the industry provides a high-technology export that should be cherished.

But Rose, who sits on the Commons committee on alternate energy, thinks "we've made a wrong bet" in the commitment made to the nuclear industry for the last 25 years.

"We still haven't solved the waste-management problem that can last for thousands of years," said Rose, MP for the B.C. riding of Mission-Port Moody.

All three parties agree on the need for stiff safeguards against the abuse of nuclear power and its technology.

Wilson said there must be more effort at persuading countries to sign the nuclear non-proliferation treaty.

TACOMA, Wash. (AP) — Former Pierce County Sheriff George Janovich is being shuffled from one prison to another as authorities try to find one where he can serve time anonymously on a federal racketeering conviction.

"I'm getting awfully sick of Uncle Sam's travel agency," Janovich's wife Jody said.

She said that at last report, her husband was in a holding cell in Anthony, a small town on the Texas-New Mexico state line, after being recognized by three prisoners at La Tuna federal prison near El Paso, Texas.

After losing his bid to remain free pending appeals, Janovich was sent to the Sandstone Federal Correctional Institution in Minnesota, then was denied admission because one of the guards had worked at the Pierce County Jail while he was sheriff.

Authorities said they feared the guard would be blamed if anything happened to his former boss.

"He sat in Minneapolis for three weeks," the former sheriff's wife said. "He was not in jail. He had a private room with a color television set. The doors were left open. He could go shopping if he wanted. Nobody was afraid he would run away."

"Now George is safe, but he is not comfortable. He's in a holding cell near the prison. I have no idea if these three men who identified him are a threat to him."

Janovich was convicted in 1979 of participating in what the government said was a scheme to gain control of the tavern trade in unincorporated areas of Pierce County through tactics that included arson, assault, extortion and attempted murder.

During his more than 30 years of work in law enforcement, Janovich handled the arrests of hundreds of criminals, many still serving time in various penal institutions.

AUTOPLAN '81

CHANGES FOR 1981

WHAT'S E.A.I.R. IN 1981?

1980 saw the implementation of Phase I of the Fundamental Auto Insurance Rating program. The whole idea behind E.A.I.R. is ultimately to remove any form of discrimination in automobile insurance rates for reasons of age, sex, marital status or where a person lives in the province. It seeks to link Autoplan rates solely to an individual's driving record, habits and attitudes. And that's fair.

Phase II of the five-year E.A.I.R. program will take effect on January 1, 1981. Here are the highlights:

1. REMOVAL OF AGE AS A RATING FACTOR

This step completes the removal of age, sex and marital status as factors in determining how much you pay for your Autoplan insurance. From now on, no individual or group will be penalized or favoured solely on the basis of age, sex or marital status.

2. INTRODUCTION OF A DRIVER ACCIDENT PREMIUM

In order to place financial responsibility squarely where it belongs — on the individual behind the wheel — a Driver Accident Premium will be introduced on January 1, 1981. It will apply to drivers of vehicles rated for pleasure or drive-to-work use. It means that drivers of such vehicles who are responsible for an accident which results in property damage or bodily injury to others will pay an additional premium of $390 for each accident.

This premium may be paid in one lump sum or in three equal instalments — the first payable at the time liability is determined, and the second and third on the next two anniversaries of the accident.

If the total claim is $100 or less, this Driver Accident Premium will not be charged. If the liability is divided, each driver whose share of the claim is more than $100 will be charged the full Driver Accident Premium. If the claim is less than $390, the driver who is at fault may choose to make a single payment equal to the amount of the claim, rather than pay the Driver Accident Premium.

This premium is charged to the driver of the vehicle, whether or not he or she is the owner. Failure to pay a Driver Accident Premium after notice from the Corporation will result in denial of Own Damage coverage for a subsequent claim for a vehicle owned by that driver.

There are two exceptions to this new Driver Accident Premium:

(a) It does not apply to drivers of vehicles rated for commercial or business use. Since the cost of insurance is a business expense, it's unfair that an employee-driver should pay the Driver Accident Premium when responsible for an accident while driving an employer's vehicle.

However, accidents will still mean higher insurance costs for owners of such vehicles because business and commercial vehicles will continue to be rated under the existing Safe Driving Vehicle Discount system in 1981.

(b) The Driver Accident Premium will also not apply to drivers of motorcycles or trailers. This is because the cost of the accident premium could exceed the total cost of Autoplan insurance for these low-premium vehicles. However, motorcycles and trailers will still be rated according to the Safe Driving Vehicle Discount system in 1981.

3. CONTINUATION OF THE SAFE DRIVING VEHICLE DISCOUNT

The Safe Driving Vehicle Discount system will continue to be applied throughout 1981.

For instance, if your vehicle was involved in an accident at any time in the three years prior to December 31, 1980, you will lose, or already have lost, part of your Safe Driving Vehicle Discount.

Despite any changes in the E.A.I.R. program, you will still have to earn back the full 3-year discount with the required one, two or three years of accident-free driving.

An accident occurring after December 31, 1980, on which a Third Party claim is paid, will result in assessment of a Driver Accident Premium.

4. REVISIONS TO THE PENALTY POINTS PREMIUM PROGRAM

In addition to the new Driver Accident Premium for people who cause accidents, 1981 will see a revision of the Penalty Points Premium program as a deterrent to irresponsible drivers who acquire penalty points for traffic violations.

The minimum number of points a driver can acquire without financial penalty is now 4 instead of 5. The maximum number is now 25 instead of 20.

The dollar amount of the additional Penalty Points Premium is calculated by squaring the number of points, equating that figure to dollars and adding 30%.

5. ADJUSTMENT OF TERRITORIAL RATES

Further changes will be made in the E.A.I.R. program towards eliminating differences in territorial rates. In 1981, these differences will be adjusted to a maximum spread of 20% between territories.

WHAT'S NEW IN 1981?

Several insurance options will be available to you in 1981 when you renew your Autoplan insurance. Please take time to check them out before you renew.

They are part of ICBC's continuing program to provide a broader range of coverage to meet your specific needs.

1. UNDERINSURED MOTORIST PROTECTION

This option provides extended protection to the victims of accidents where the insurance carried by the driver at fault is not sufficient to pay claims for bodily injury and death. It provides for the victim's own Third Party Liability coverage to be applied to bring the total payment to the higher amount of coverage.

For example, in a situation where a driver at fault carries $100,000 Third Party Liability coverage but the victim carries $500,000, the higher amount can be applied to the claim.

2. INCOME REPLACEMENT

If you consider that the standard No-Fault benefits would be inadequate to cover your lost earnings in the event of an injury resulting from an accident, you may wish to consider this endorsement. It provides limited additional lost income protection and death benefits.

3. LOSS OF VEHICLE USE

You can purchase this endorsement in conjunction with an Own Damage policy. It provides for reimbursement on a fixed scale to cover the expenses of a rental vehicle when you make a valid claim for Own Damage coverage.

You can choose reimbursement to start 24, 48 or 72 hours after the accident is reported to ICBC or the police. It will end with completion of repairs, replacement of your vehicle, or the date on which ICBC tenders settlement for the loss of your vehicle.

4. AUTOPLAN RATES FOR 1981

Unavoidably, Autoplan rates will increase in 1981. Why? Quite simply because the number of accidents is going up, the severity of personal injuries is increasing, the cost of settling claims — both collision and personal injury — is skyrocketing.

We can't control these factors. The costs we can control, like the administration of Autoplan, are among the lowest for any corporation in the auto insurance industry in North America: 16 cents of the premium dollar versus an industry average of 30 cents.

Inflation plays a large part in the rising cost of settling insurance claims, but so does the increasing complexity and sophistication of today's automobiles. Dual headlights, unitized bodies, lightweight materials, catalytic converters... these are just some of the advances in safety, environmental protection, fuel economy and styling that make every accident that much more costly. Settlements for injuries are also increasing each year.

So, here are the rate increases scheduled for 1981:

An average increase of 31% for compulsory Third Party Liability coverage.

An average increase of 48% for extended Third Party Liability and Collision coverages.

Further details on all aspects of Autoplan may be found in the 1981 Motorist Kit available from your local Autoplan Agent and from Motor Licence Offices.

Answer to yesterday's puzzle

"I think you're probably in a rut."

DEAR ABBY: That kid who assed his mother when she told him to take his bike out of the street, or she wouldn't buy him another one, needs a whipping. That's what I would get, and I wouldn't be allowed to ride my bike for a week. I know, because it happened to me.

PAUL J. (AGE 11)

DEAR ABBY: You were right in advising GETS LOST A LOT not to be ashamed, that some of our brainiest people get lost a lot. I wonder, however, if you are aware that those of us who have difficulty in remembering directions could be victims of "dyslexia" — a condition which has nothing to do with intelligence.

In addition to losing our way, we have difficulties learning to read, to spell and to do the simplest problems in math. Einstein, Edison and Nelson Rockefeller were dyslexic. There is no known cure, although early diagnosis is helpful in giving a child special training so he can learn to cope with his condition.

I understand this runs in families.

ALSO GETS LOST A LOT

DEAR ALSO: My twin and I were not dyslexic, but we got lost more than any two people we know. Why? Because when directions were being given, we were always talking instead of listening.

DEAR ABBY: The quandary of LOVERS FOR SURE calls for a word of encouragement.

Having married my own cousin, I concluded after 27 years of domestic bliss and six perfectly normal children that cousins in fact bring a commonality of background and outlook to a marriage that contributes to an early strengthening of the conjugal bond, and remains a permanent uniting influence.

As for the genetic lottery, it's not only for relatives; everybody is in it!

UNREPENTING COUSIN

DEAR UNREPENTING: Granted, everybody is indeed in it, but the risk of hereditary diseases and tendencies toward them are greatly increased when cousins marry.

I repeat, genetic counseling is good insurance. Everyone may not be as lucky as you.

If Housewives Were Paid, They'd All Hire Maids

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1981 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: ANONYMOUS MOM needs to learn a few things. She scolded her son for leaving his bike in the middle of the street, saying, "If it gets stolen, I'm not buying you another one." Then her smart-mouthed kid shot back, "You didn't buy me the first one — Daddy did!"

She said that made her realize that because she wasn't a wage earner, she had not contributed much to the household.

Well, according to Family Circle magazine, the value of the average full-time homemaker's work is $783.79 a week — or $41,000 a year!

The magazine stated that the average homemaker performs at least 22 separate functions with child care being the function that takes the most time — 186 hours a week on the average. (At a token $1 an hour, this would amount to over $9,000 a year.)

The seven or more hours a woman spends cleaning house, at a minimum $3.21 an hour, adds up to at least $22 a week; 13 hours as a cook at $4.75 an hour is another $62 a week. The three hours a week (average) that a wife spends acting as a maid or hostess for her husband, at $20 an hour, adds another $60 to her "wage bill," notes the magazine.

How about that?

ELIZABETH S.

DEAR ELIZABETH: Thanks. And if the magazine didn't figure in the other duties performed by mother, such as nurse, chauffeur, seamstress, tutor, referee, hand-holder, confidante and counselor — it should have. Now for a kid's-eye view:

SPORTS

Veteran skips leading

Veteran skips Kevin Smale of Prince George and Tony Eberts of Kamloops showed fine form Sunday as they led their rinks to within two wins each of entering the B.C. Interior men's curling playoffs.

Smale, B.C. representative at the Canadian curling championships in 1969 and 1971, downed

Brian Markle of Kamloops 8-2 and Lorne Delisle, also of Prince George, 7-5. Eberts, a B.C. finalist last year, edged Paddy Green of Prince Rupert 8-7 and Mel Daniel of Prince George 7-5.

Smale and Eberts need two wins apiece in the B.C. Curling Association's 85th annual men's bonspiel here to reach the semifinals of the A event and qualify for the interior playoffs. Seven other zone winners declared earlier are already in the playoffs. There are 65 rinks in the competition.

Philly getting good mileage

Philadelphia's running game ran out of gas, but not soon enough for Phoenix Suns.

Philadelphia '76ers used their fast-break offence to open a quick 10-point lead and were ahead by as many as 18 points before sputtering. But even though they failed to score a basket in the final minutes, the Sixers got clutch foul shooting from Lionel Hollins and Maurice Cheeks and managed to hold on for a 98-93 National Basketball Association victory over the Suns on Sunday.

"We were concerned about Philadelphia's blazing fast break," said Suns coach John MacLeod. "When they get their running game going, they can be devastating."

But sometimes the Sixers have trouble maintaining that level of performance.

"We had our intensity up in the beginning, then we let up," admitted Philadelphia's Bobby Jones. "But we played good defensively and we had good rebounding."

In other games, it was: Boston 115, Seattle 106; Washington 118, New Jersey 100; and Portland 118, San Antonio 100.

Results Saturday: Chicago 104, Atlanta 102; Detroit 117, Cleveland 94; Indiana 107, Dallas 89; Houston 108, Utah 91; Denver 120, San Antonio 115; Milwaukee 121, San Diego 117; and Golden State 117, New York 110. Celtics 115, Sonics 104.

Robert Parish scored 32 points and grabbed 17 rebounds as the Celtics rolled to their 12th win in a row and 24th in the last 25 games to remain one game behind Philadelphia in the Atlantic Division race.

Seattle, loser of five in a row, trailed by two points with 6:24 remaining, but two free throws apiece by Parish and Larry Bird helped Boston pull away.

Bullets 118, Nets 100.

Mitch Kupchak scored 16 of his 30 points in the fourth quarter when Washington outscored the Nets 41-24 to win. Kupchak's basket put the Bullets ahead to stay 90-82 and he also started a 9-0 surge that broke the game open.

Blazers 118, Spurs 100.

Kermit Alexander scored seven straight points to spark a 24-7 spurt, overlapping the third and fourth periods, that carried Portland to victory. San Antonio led 80-79 with 1:24 left in the third period when Billy Ray Bates converted a three-point play to start the rally and give Portland the lead for good. Jim Paxson, with 21 points, led seven Blazers in double figures, including Washington and Bates with 13 apiece. George Gervin led San Antonio and game scorers with 26 points.

SPORTS BRIEFS

ARCADIA, Calif. (AP) — Even when he does not ride a winner, Bill Shoemaker keeps adding to thoroughbred racing records that may never be approached, much less broken.

With a third-place finish aboard Fiastero, earning $11,250 in the $80,000 San Pasqual Handicap at Santa Anita on Saturday, the 49-year-old Shoemaker's career earnings passed the $80-million mark.

He was the only jockey to win two races on the card Sunday as his total of victories reached 7,939.

QUEBEC (CP) — Left winger Marc Tardif has apparently earned a second chance with Quebec Nordiques of the National Hockey League.

Nordiques general manager Maurice Filion announced Sunday night that Tardif, who asked for a few days off in ponder his future following a meeting with Filion and coach Michel Bergeron last week, will rejoin the Nordiques today.

The Nordiques were reported to have considered buying out Tardif's contract, which has three years to run at an estimated $250,000 a year, because they were disenchanted with his recent play.

BROWNSBURG, Que. (CP) — Ken Hugessen of the Viking Ski Club of Montreal won the men's elite cross-country competition in the 68-kilometre Laurentian Loppet on Sunday in a time of five hours, 20 minutes, 46 seconds.

Pierre L'Ecuyer finished in second spot in 5:25:42 as 86 racers in the under-35-years-old category, crossed the finish line at Brownsburg. Kathleen Butler had the best time in the elite women's under-35 category, completing the 68 kilometres in 7:37:43.

Hugh Gurd won the 34-kilometre event for men under 35, recording a time of 2:14:29, while Karen Oljemark led the women in 2:48:08.

MONTERREY, Mexico (Reuters) — Johan Kriek of South Africa won the Monterrey Grand Prix tennis tournament Sunday.

Bossy hitches ride on a rocket's tail

UNIONDALE, N.Y. (CP) — Mike Bossy's earnings as a player soar with each scoring bonus, but it will cost New York Islanders bigger bucks to keep him next season.

Bossy, the Islanders' scoring leader, equalled Maurice (Rocket) Richard's 1944-45 standard of 50 goals in 50 games. Charlie Simmer of Los Angeles Kings missed Richard's mark by one goal.

After this season, Bossy is a free agent. The Islanders' general manager, Bill Torrey, says there's lots of time to talk about a new contract.

"He has to be more valuable," Torrey said after watching Bossy score his 49th and 50th goals in the Islanders' 7-4 victory over Quebec Nordiques Saturday night.

The Nordiques have lost seven straight to the Islanders since joining the National Hockey League last season.

"Hey, when the time comes we'll sit down," Torrey said of Bossy's contract negotiations. "I have a pretty good idea what his market value is, so I don't think this is the time to get into that."

Rather, it was time to concentrate on Bossy's 50-in-50 feat.

"He had pressure," Torrey said. "It was added by Simmer taking his run at it Saturday afternoon, missing by a whisker with his three goals."

"Simmer drew even more attention to the record. It wasn't a case of just coming here and looking. Bossy was second in goals in the league and Simmer went ahead of him.

"That made it a little bit more difficult for Bossy and he fought it all night. A lot of guys would have packed it in, but as long as there is a second on the clock and he's got a shot, he can score."

Until late in the third period, Bossy hadn't scored in almost 177 minutes after he got three goals against Washington Capitals on Jan. 17. He was blanked by Calgary Flames and Detroit Red Wings, and the Nordiques kept him scoreless until a power play at 15:50 of the third period.

Bossy got his 49th goal on the power play, whipping a backhand into the short side of Quebec goalie Ron Grahame, breaking a 4-4 tie. At 18:31, Bossy scored his 50th, drilling home centre Bryan Trottier's pass.

Bossy had a chance to break Richard's mark but set up the last goal by Trottier at 18:50.

In the first two periods, Bossy didn't have a shot. He made six in the third period.

Bossy's stature as a player has grown with four 50-goal seasons in a row. In 3½ years, he has scored 223 goals in 276 games for the Islanders, the highest-scoring percentage in NHL history for players with 200 or more goals.

Twenty-two of Bossy's goals this season have come on the power play. In eight games, he scored three or more goals to set another NHL record. Twice he scored four goals.

Unlike Richard, who went scoreless in only 14 games during his 50-goal string, Bossy has been scoreless in almost half his games.

Bossy scored in 27 games and was blanked in 23.

Richard reached 50 on March 18, 1945.

THE SUPER BOWL

One the outlaws won

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — They are a roster of rejects, living in the halfway house of the National Football League. They are outcasts, playing for a franchise operated by an owner called an outlaw.

They are a team torn between two cities, 45 men who play for each other and against the rest of the world.

Call Oakland Raiders all those things today, but don't forget to call them champions. They are the world champions of professional football, convincing winners of the Super Bowl with a 27-10 victory over Philadelphia Eagles on Sunday.

Led by Cinderella quarterback Jim Plunkett, who completed a storybook return from football's scrap heap with a record-shattering, three-touchdown, 261-yard game, the Raiders stepped gingerly into the glass slipper and found the fit was perfect.

"World champions! That sure sounds nice," said guard Gene Upshaw, captain of this scrappy team which delights in confounding the establishment. "We were against the world."

"Everyone said we had no chance, but we knew we did. They kept reminding us we're not good enough. You know, if we played another game next week, we'd still be underdogs."

It is a role the renegade Raiders delight in filling. "We have a strong feeling for each other and it makes us stronger and better as a team," said flanker Bob Chandler, one of the retrained, who caught four of Plunkett's passes for 77 yards.

The pass Chandler remembered best was the one he did not catch — a busted play which developed into an 80-yard touchdown for running back Kenny King. It was in the final seconds of the first quarter with the Raiders scrimmaging from their own 20 yard line and leading 7-0.

"I wanted to go to Bobby, but I ran out of time," Plunkett explained. "I started to scramble."

That was a signal for King to start free-lancing. He had been running a simple short pattern, but when the quarterback leaves the protection of his pocket, all bets are off. The linebacker covering King moved in to try and trap Plunkett. Suddenly, the running back was alone and Plunkett saw him.

King caught the ball at the Oakland 39 and turned the play into the longest touchdown pass in Super Bowl history. And when he high-stepped his way into the end zone, there was Chandler, the original primary receiver, right behind him.

That touchdown gave Oakland a 14-0 lead and all three players involved in that key play were reclamation projects.

acquired and nurtured by owner Al Davis, who never let his war with the league interfere in the team's championship march.

You would not invite Davis and NFL commissioner Pete Rozelle to the same cocktail party. They are bitter adversaries, locked in a court battle over the Raiders' proposed move to Los Angeles. Davis has linked Rozelle's name to ticket-scalping schemes and the commissioner has denied those charges and called the Oakland owner an outlaw.

But both men were on their best behavior for the championship trophy presentation ceremony. Rozelle was cordial, paying tribute to this team, the first wild-card club to win the Super Bowl. And Davis accepted gracefully and advised his team to "take pride and be proud."

Davis acquired Chandler from Buffalo Bills and King from Houston Oilers during the offseason. He saw qualities in both men which he thought might help his team. They were rejects, but they fit into the Raider blueprint. So did Plunkett, but only as a backup to Dan Pastorini, another, more glamorous off-season acquisition.

Chandler and King were minor reclamations compared to Plunkett. He was a washed-up quarterback, ready for retirement, when Davis signed him. He spent two seasons virtually unused and a disappointing career seemed at a dead-end for the 32-year-old quarterback.

"I was so far down that I wanted to throw in the towel and try something else," Plunkett said. "Fortunately, I had some good friends who stayed with me, who told me to hang in there."

"I am indebted to them." When Pastorini broke his leg in the season's fifth game, Plunkett inherited the quarterback job. The move was made as much out of desperation as anything else because prized rookie Marc Wilson was not ready for the job.

Given the chance, Plunkett flourished, weaving the Raiders through the regular season and the mine field that awaits any wild-card team in the playoffs. When it was over, he was the most valuable player in the Super Bowl and beamed at the designation.

Plunkett picked their pockets all day long, settling for short passes underneath the deep backs and spicing them with an occasional bomb, just to show Philadelphia he is still capable of throwing home runs.

The game went badly for the Eagles right from the start. On their third play from scrimmage, Ron Jaworski threw his first pass. It was complete — to Oakland linebacker Rod Martin — the first of a record three swipes recorded by Martin in the game. He returned the interception from midfield to the Philadelphia 30 and seven plays later Plunkett had the Raiders in the end zone with a two-yard pass to Cliff Branch.

For a fleeting moment, Philadelphia thought it had the tying touchdown late in the first quarter when Jaworski hit Rod Parker with a 40-yard pass in the end zone. But an illegal motion penalty against Harold Carmichael nullified the play and moments later Plunkett and King burned the Eagles with their 80-yard TD for a 14-0 lead.

Early in the second period, the Eagles got on the scoreboard when barefoot kicker Tony Franklin converted a 30-yard field goal.

Then, in the last 3½ minutes of the first half, Philadelphia drove from its 27 to the Oakland 11. The Raider defence stiffened and the Eagles tried to settle for three more points. Instead, they got none when linebacker Ted Hendricks blocked Franklin's 28-yard field goal try.

The blocked field goal sent the Eagles into the dressing room on a depressing note. It got worse when they came out for the second half. Plunkett drove the Raiders to their third touchdown, this time hitting Branch with a 29-yard scoring pass. Branch simply outwrestled rookie cornerback Roynell Young for the ball.

The Raiders were clearly in control. They were dominating the line of scrimmage and had constructed a 21-3 lead. They had the Eagle defensive backs bickering among themselves.

"They were upset," said King. "They were saying things like, 'Hey, what's going on here?'"

The answer was Plunkett, pulling one completion after another out of his bag of tricks.

Before the third quarter was over, Chris Bahr kicked a 46-yard field goal to make it 24-3. Still, the Eagles weren't dead.

Oakland's defence had something to do with that. The Raiders, smelling victory and savoring the chance to stick it to the establishment again, were swarming over the Eagles at that point.

They grudgingly surrendered Philadelphia's only TD on Jaworski's eight-yard pick-six, tight end Keith Kropfle at the start of the final period and then finished the Eagles off. Bahr's 35-yard field goal completed the scoring and when time ran out the Raiders were champions of the league they are suing.

For the 75,000 fans who packed the Louisiana Superdome for the game, it was a memorable day and not only because of football. Most of them wore yellow ribbons distributed by the NFL in tribute to the Americans who returned home Sunday after 444 days as hostages in Iran.

A giant yellow bow made of a canvas-like material adorned the outside of the dome and the players had yellow strips on the backs of their helmets.

PLUNKETT MAKES PIKERS OF ALL

By Will Grimsley
NEW ORLEANS (AP) — On a day the heart of the United States was wrenched by the homecoming of its former hostages from Iran, it was warmed by a timid, Indian-featured young man who wrote one of the most thrilling chapters in the annals of sport.

If there's anything we relish as much as a happy ending to a period of travail — as in the case of the hostages — it is seeing some kid overcome almost every conceivable obstacle and rise to the top.

That's the reason our kids went heavy for those 10-cent Horatio Alger throwbacks and so avidly followed the pulp-paper exploits of Frank and Dick Merriwell.

Now Jim Plunkett has made pikers of them all. When this 32-year-old Mexican-American, son of blind parents and a college football hero later scorned by the pros, quarterbacked and passed the raging, underdog Raiders to a 27-10 victory over Philadelphia Eagles in the Super Bowl on Sunday, script writers were sent scurrying for a scenario to top it.

Standing in the glare of a spotlight, a battery of microphones at his chin and sweat cascading down his square, rugged face, Plunkett disdained the hero's mantle.

"Now that you are the MVP in the Super Bowl, do you feel you are a storybook story?" a reporter asked.

"You write storybook stories, I don't," Plunkett replied. "I just read them."

"You were the Heisman Trophy winner in college and you quarterbacked Stanford's win over Ohio State in the Rose Bowl," someone else interjected. "Is this just as great a thrill for you?" Plunkett's brow furrowed in meditation. "When I did those things in college," he answered, "I thought they were the biggest things in my life.

"But they were at a different time and a different place. Because of the circumstances, this is more satisfying."

When he was a "twee" back in San Jose, Calif., he suffered rickets. It was thought he might be an invalid. But he persevered, became a four-star athlete in high school and got a scholarship to Stanford.

His blind father died when he was a sophomore in college, leaving him with a mother who could not see. She listens to his games back home.

Drafted out of college by New England Patriots, he threw 19 touchdowns passes his first season and was NFL rookie of the year.

After four years the Patriots traded him to San Francisco where his fortunes suddenly went sour. His statistics fell off. Critics said he was a poor passer in the mold of former Minnesota quarterback Joe Kapp. He had a wobbly delivery and no pulse.

San Francisco dumped him. He put out feelers to other pro clubs. For a disheartening period, the phone never rang. Then one day Al Davis, maverick owner of the Raiders, brought him into the fold with Oakland's band of rascals, rejects and retrained.

Plunkett at first was a stand-in for the veteran Kenny Stabler. When Stabler was traded to Houston, the Raiders brought in hotshot Don Pastorini. At Oakland, he did not get to handle the ball once during 1978.

In the fifth game of the 1980 season, Pastorini broke his leg. The Raiders had to give Plunkett the ball.

The quarterback reject proceeded to carry the team the rest of the way, winning nine of the last 11 games of the season and then sweeping three playoff games leading to the Super Bowl.

ALL ABOUT PEOPLE

: hockey players and married widows

Things aren't getting any easier for Progressive Conservative Leader Joe Clark.

Less than five weeks before the Tory national convention at which Clark's future as party leader could be decided, some polls have been published showing party support for the former prime minister is far from strong.

The most recent obstacle to Clark's continued reign over Torydom was a poll, published during the weekend, showing less than half his caucus members—41 of 102—plan to support him by voting against a leadership review at the convention, which begins Feb. 27.

That wasn't enough to bother Clark, however. The beleaguered leader kept his chin up Saturday and denied the existence of the poll.

"It's never been my practice to comment on fiction," he said.

Mike Bossy and Charlie Simmer—two of Canada's hockey-playing heroes who ply their trade in the United States—can be justified in feeling a great weight has been lifted off their shoulders.

Bossy and Simmer, high-scoring forwards with New York Islanders and Los Angeles Kings, respectively, finally have ended their quest for 50 goals in the first 50 games of the National Hockey League season, a feat not accomplished since 1944-45, when it was done by hockey legend Maurice (Rocket) Richard.

On Saturday, each player appeared in his 50th game of the 1980-81 season, but only Bossy lived up to the standard set by Richard.

The Islanders' right winger scored two goals late in a game against Quebec Nordiques to equal the mark. Simmer also made a valiant effort, scoring three goals against Boston Bruins, but fell short with 49.

As for how the players felt now that the mystical quest was over, Bossy may have said it best. "I felt like someone had lifted 1,000 pounds off my shoulders."

Television personality David Frost has married Lynne Frederick, recent widow of comedian Peter Sellers.

The announcement of the marriage on Saturday brought an angry reaction from Sellers' children. Said Victoria, Sellers' 16-year-old daughter by his marriage to movie star Britt Ekland: "Why did Lynne keep telling us all how much she loved daddy after he died? How could she marry someone else so soon?"

Frost, 41, and the 25-year-old British actress have been seen together frequently since last month. She was Frost's girlfriend six years ago, before her 1977 marriage to Sellers, who died July 14.

Dancer Mikhail Baryshnikov's tattered ballet slippers and a display case to put them in were among the high-priced items for sale in the Philadelphia Orchestra's annual fund-raising Marathon, which opened Sunday.

In addition to the slippers, priced at $500, a chance to lead the orchestra will go for whatever orchestra spokesman Louis Hood can get for it.

Princess Juliana of the Netherlands attended a private preview in Toronto on Saturday of a Vincent Van Gogh exhibit at the Art Gallery of Ontario.

The 71-year-old former queen of Holland, who abdicated her throne in favor of her daughter, Beatrix, last April, stayed with friends and made no public appearances other than a taped interview for a multilingual television station. She also dropped in on Ontario Premier William Davis.

Bernie Galbraith, an Edmonton school board science supervisor who beat 15,189 other contestants in a quiz to earn the title of Canada's superbrain, says he almost failed grade school.

Three months ago, Galbraith tried the test, which consisted of a series of logic puzzles and intelligence tests. On Saturday, he defeated three other finalists in a test of about 200 questions to be declared Canada's smartest person. His prize is a trip to Athens. Galbraith said a teacher once told him he passed Grade 2 "by the skin of my teeth."

Phil Donahue, the talk show host married to actress Mario Thomas, has this word of wisdom for anyone whose marriage has run into difficulties: "Marriage is like a prize fight. The preliminaries are generally better than the main event."

Wendy O. Williams, the 28-year-old lead singer of the Plasmatics, thinks female performers should be able to appear shirtless just like male performers.

But Cleveland police disagreed last week when they arrested the punk rock singer for allegedly pandering obscenity at a performance at a rock nightclub. She was released on $200 bond.

Policeman Bob Singleton said Williams appeared on stage wearing a cotton white top and matching shorts, but later performed nude and did a sadomasochistic dance using the microphone.

"Women should have the same rights as men," she said. "If a man took off his shirt, no one would arrest him."

Mormon Church officials have confirmed that former Black Panther activist Eldridge Cleaver has been studying the Mormon Church.

Officials said the author and ex-convict has been visited by church missionaries in Menlo Park, Calif., and has spoken privately with Paul Dunn, a member of the church's hierarchy.

A Cleveland woman has sent Saturday Evening Post editors combing through back issues to search for an advertisement in which Ronald Reagan modeled shirts.

Marty Spath, whose collection of 10,000 magazines dates to 1812, discovered that a reprint of an early 1950s ad for Van Heusen shirts showing Reagan was wrong. The reprint, published this month in three national magazines, said the ad originally was printed in The Saturday Evening Post on Sept. 29, 1953.

But Spath paged through her issue of that date and found that actor Tony Curtis
